Claim 28, now reads:

28. A system for etching a substrate, comprising:
an etching chamber for the substrate;
a piping system in fluid communication with the etching chamber and having at least a first fluid feed and a second fluid feed, wherein the first fluid feed is connected at a source end to a source of a first etching gas, wherein the second fluid feed is connected at a source end to a source of a second etching gas; an auxiliary chamber positioned within the piping system and having an inlet and an outlet, wherein the inlet includes a first controllable shut-off valve and is in gas communication with the first fluid feed and the outlet includes a second controllable shut-off valve and is in gas communication with the etching chamber;

a third controllable shut-off valve positioned in the piping system in the second fluid feed; means for preventing diffusion of the second etching gas through the inlet of the auxiliary chamber by opening the first and second shut-off valves only one at a time and by opening the second and the third shut-off valves only one at a time; and wherein the walls of the auxiliary chamber and the piping system upstream of the auxiliary chamber are each formed of different materials.
